$200,000 SUBSCRIBED OVER

For the South Fork Reservoir Project-$130,000 Yet to Be Raised, Then the Stock Subscribers will Meet and Form the Reservoir Corporation-Farmers to Furnish $80,000 and the City People $50,000 of the Balance Still to Be Raised---Fact that the Flow of Ogden River Has Gone Down to Less Than 60 Feet of Water When Over 700 Feet Are Required, Brings Proof Home--Scorched Crops, Dried Up Farms and Disgusted Land Owners Now Are the Proof of Water Shortage-Everybody Requested to Get In Line and RAILROAD MEN Boost for More Water and a Greater Ogden.

Now is the time to take up the South Fork Reservoir dam! again and finish the project. Three months ago when subscriptions were asked the farmers were too busy to talk and the committee decided to wait until August shall have convinced the people of Weber county that the 743 feet of water rights filed on for the Ogden river would produce less than 100 feet in August, as was foretold by the engineers, the committee and the records of the

The city and county engineers jointly measured the Ogden river flow early in August and found 76 second feet of water, half of which was flowing through the Power company's pipe. One. week ago the flow was a little under sixty feet.

From every section of Weber county comes the news that the damage to crops has been great. Jos. A. Taylor, the water com-missioner, stated that one million dollars would not pay for the crops dried up by the sun. If that is true-and some men well posted say that the damage was even greater-then the loss of Weber country crops would build the reservoir every year.

Think of the short-sighted policy of the farmer. Because he has a water right in a canal that furnishes flood water in the spring, he tries to fool himself that he has enough water for July and August, and when the river runs down to 60 or 70 feet, he cries that somebody is stealing his water!

The facts are that Mound Fort canal is the first right on the river, with 44 feet, and then comes Lynne with 29 feet. That makes a total of 73 feet. There is not enough water in the Ogden river to supply the full rights of these two ditches and yet we have the people of the following canals howling because they don't get enough water. Just look at this:

First two appropriators, with July and August rights. . . . 73 feet

Total filing on Ogden river discovered to date 743.83 feet

There is the story. For 748 feet of water appropriated, there is not enough water to supply the first two canals. Does that look like more water is needed for July and August?

Is there any other place to get it than at the South Fork? If not, why not built the South Fork Reservoir?

What is the matter with the farmer? He has no water in July and August. He loses enough each year to build the reservoir, yet he hesitates to build this reservoir, even when the people of Ogden are willing to furnish half of the money.

which makes just exactly $211,610, of that they were forced to sign the subwhich Ogden City and the people of Ogden have subscribed $185,605, and the farmers only $26,005. In other words, the people of Ogden have sub-scribed five times as much as the farmers. Yet it should be just the reverse. If we can get $140,000 more subscribed the reservoir will be a The farmer should subscribe for all of that, but he wants to see the water before he buys it. He may get it after he sees the water, but it will cost him $150 to $175 an acre-share after the dam is built, while he can now buy it for $35. One farmer, last Tuesday, said he would have gladly paid $300 for the use of five acres of water right for July and August of this year. Think of it. That would have been $60 per acre for the use of the water for one year, yet it will only cost him $35 per acre for the permanent water right. The water rental of the reservoir stock in dry years will bring in more than the stock costs. If there is any reason why the farmer besitates to subscribe for his share of the stock we want to know it at once. Now, the Standard proposes that of the $140,000 balance yet to be raised, the people of Ogden subscribe for $50,000 additional and that the farmers subscribe for $90,000 more; that will then show the subscription sufstantially as follows:

Five operating officials of the Orecon Short Line were vesterday pro-moted to the positions of assistant general managers of the company.

They are E. C. Manson, general superintendent; Fred H. Knickerbocker, assistant to the general manager; J. F. Dunn, superintendent of motive power; Carl Stradley, chief engineer, and A. F. Hutchinson, general purchasing agent. Under the new system each of these officials will, as heretofore, be directly answerable to the general manager, and aside from their present duties will be vested with such authority or evecutive power as may at any time be necessary. Their old titles will be dropped except where it is necessary to refer to them in compliance with laws or existing contracts.

It means a broadening of each man's field of supervision and is deidedly in the nature of a promotion for each, according to W. H. Bancroft, general manager of the company, com whose office the announcement issued yesterday.

Over a year ago the unit system was inaugurated in the offices of the division superintendents. Having proven successful there it has been extended to the highest offices of the operating department on that road and several others in the Harriman system. The ultimate aim is to install the system throughout the entire Harr man properties.

The promotions made yesterday follow directly on the beels of the visit of Charles Hines, special representative of Julius Kruttechnitt in the Chiago offices of the Harriman system. Mr. Hines is said to be now engaged in extending the same system to other Harriman roads.
